GOOD TO KNOW

Panama has the second largest economy in Central America and is also the fastest growing economy and largest per capita consumer in Central America. Since 2010, Panama remains the second most competitive economy in Latin America, according to the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Index.

JURISDICTION INFORMATION

Located in Central America between North and South America, the Republic of Panama is bordered by Costa Rica to the west, Colombia to the southeast, the Caribbean to the north, and the Pacific Ocean to the south. The country's capital and largest city is Panama City, home to the entrance of the Panama Canal. Once a Spanish colony, Panama broke away from Spain in 1821 and joined a union of Nueva Granada, Ecuador, and Venezuela named the Republic of Gran Colombia. When Gran Colombia dissolved in 1831, Panama and Nueva Granada remained joined, eventually becoming the Republic of Colombia. With US backing, Panama seceded from Colombia in 1903, allowing the Panama Canal to be built between 1904 and 1914. Today, Panama is one of the most well-known and recognised offshore jurisdictions worldwide thanks to its high level of confidentiality and highly efficient registry.

POLITICAL STRUCTURE

Panama's politics take place in a framework of a presidential representative democratic republic, whereby the President of Panama is both head of state and head of government, and of a multi-party system. Executive power is exercised by the government. Legislative power is vested in both the government and the National Assembly. The judiciary is independent of the executive and the legislature. For all people national elections are universal and mandatory for all citizens 18 years and older. National elections for the executive and legislative branches take place every five years. Members of the judicial branch (justices) are appointed by the head of state. Panama's National Assembly is elected by proportional representation in fixed electoral districts, so many smaller parties are represented.

ECONOMY

The economy of Panama is a fully dollarized free market economy with a history of low inflation. It is based mainly on a well-developed services sector that accounts for nearly 80% of its GDP. Services include the Panama Canal, banking, tourism, the Colón Free Trade Zone, insurance, container ports, and flagship registry, medical and health, and other business. The country's industry includes, manufacturing of aircraft spare parts, cements, drinks, adhesives, and textiles. Also the leading exports for Panama are bananas, shrimp, sugar, coffee, and clothing.

POPULATION

According to a census conducted in July 2014, the population of Panama is approximately 4.1 million. More than half the population lives in the Panama City–Colón metropolitan corridor, which spans several cities. Panama's urban population exceeds 70%, making Panama's population the most urbanized in Central America. The culture, customs, and language of Panama are predominantly Caribbean Spanish and the population can be broken down into the following demographics: 65% Mestizo (mixed white, Native American), 9.2% Black/mulattoes, 6.7% White, and 12.3% Native Americans.

LANGUAGE

Spanish is the official and dominant language of Panama with approximately 93% of the population speaking it as their first language. Many citizens, however, speak both English and Spanish, in addition to native languages, such as Ngäbere (a native language spoken by the indigenous Ngäbe people of Panama and Costa Rica).
