COUNTRY INFORMATION

A small island in the Caribbean, Nevis is part of the Leeward Islands chain of the West Indies. Along with Saint Kitts, Nevis forms the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis, a Commonwealth realm and the smallest sovereign nation in the Western Hemisphere in terms of population and size. Known as the “Queen of the Caribbees” as the island’s sugar plantations once created much wealth for the British Empire, today Nevis is a hub for corporate offshore services boasting some of the most secure IBC laws in the world, as well as offering appealing retirement and residency incentives in a paradisaical location.

POLITICAL STRUCTURE

Based on the British Parliamentary system, the political structure of Saint Kitts and Nevis is, however, unique in that Nevis has its own unicameral legislature, consisting of the Deputy Governor General (Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II's representative) and members of the Nevis Island Assembly. Nevis holds substantial autonomy in its legislative branch and the constitution gives power to the Nevis Island Legislature to make laws that cannot be overturned by the National Assembly. Additionally, Nevis collects its own taxes and has a separate budget. According to a 2005 statement released by the Nevis Ministry of Finance, the island has one of the highest growth rates in gross national product and per capita income in the Caribbean.

ECONOMY

Historically an economy based on the single crop of sugar, Nevis shifted industry focus in the early noughties when its major source of revenue became tourism. Today, the rapid growth of the islands' tourism sector has become the main foreign exchange earner for Saint Kitts and Nevis. The introduction of legislation in 1984 has also made offshore financial services a rapidly growing economic sector in Nevis and, by 1998, 17,500 international banking companies were registered on the island. Saint Kitts and Nevis also offers a citizenship by investment programme through which the country gains foreign direct investment. Once the government's background checks are passed, interested parties can acquire Saint Kitts and Nevis citizenship by investing in an approved real estate development.

POPULATION

According to a 2015 estimate, the combined population of Saint Kitts and Nevis is approximately 54,961 of which about 11,200 live on the island of Nevis. The country's population demographics can be broken down into the following percentages: 75.1% of African descent; 12.3% of Afro-European descent; 5.3% of mixed race; 5% of East Indian and Afro-East Indian descent; 3% of South Asian descent; and 3.3% classified as "other".

LANGUAGE

The official language of Saint Kitts and Nevis is English, while the English-based creole Saint Kitts Creole (also known as Nevisian or Nevis Creole) is also widely spoken. Though it does not have the status of an official language, approximately 40,000 people speak the local creole.
